INTRODUCTION

Why index a newspaper? A newspaper by its very nature and format is not only a source of current news and information, but is also a public record of what happened to whom and when. The newspapers of Fort Wayne are the most important sources of information about Fort Wayne — its people, places, schools, government and businesses, its festivals and social events and its controversies and problems. In addition, newspapers provide an indication of the interrelationships between the city and the state and federal governments as well as an indication of the impact national or international events have locally. Unfortunately, all this information is eventually lost without an index. In order to provide permanent access to this wealth of information we decided to index THE JOURNAL-GAZETTE, the city's only seven-day newspaper.

SUBJECT INDEX

This is an index to local and state news reported by THE JOURNAL-GAZETTE.

Admittedly, the index is not comprehensive. Since it was begun with the attitude that "something is better than nothing," the concentration is on local news and issues. Except for items of unusual significance, sports, traffic accidents, minor crimes and court proceedings are omitted. Book and film reviews, recipes, the 'Action Line' and social club announcements are also excluded. The index does cover local business news as well as news about social service organizations, professional societies, neighborhood associations and other local groups.

One of the most difficult tasks of an indexer is to standardize subject headings. It would be very confusing to find some articles under 'Memorial Coliseum', some under 'Coliseum' and others under the subject 'Allen County War Memorial Coliseum.' We have tried to be liberal with our cross references.

Under any one subject the entries are arranged in chronological order. Entries follow this format:

DATE

*TITLE OR SUMMARY OF ARTICLE

*Any words not in the title are placed in parentheses.

Any photos, illustrations, maps or charts which accompany an article are indicated. Items that are editorials, editorial cartoons, letters to the editor or essays are also noted.

Governmental units may be the most confusing to find. All city units are listed under Fort Wayne. All county units are listed under Allen County. For those agencies that combine city and county departments, we use the heading Fort Wayne - Allen County. All state or federal agencies are listed under Indiana and U.S. respectively.

Reviews of local performances are found under the heading 'reviews' subdivided by the name of the organization.

PERSONAL NAME INDEX

The second section of the index is arranged according to personal names as they are given in the newspaper. Because of this, some people may be listed under both a nickname and a proper name. With each name we have also provided the occupation or office held by the individual if such information was available in the news article.

Because of time restraints our personal name index is not nearly so complete as we would like. When we began our indexing this section was reserved for the people who were subjects of feature articles. We gave priority to listing articles under agencies or public offices rather than people's names. For instance, items about the Allen County Auditor Joan Uebelhoer will usually be found under the heading "Allen County, Auditor" in the subject index. There will be fewer entries under her name in this Personal Name Index. During the year as we refined our indexing procedures, we included more personal names.

OBITUARIES

The obituaries section was compiled by Peggy Bliss, of THE JOURNAL-GAZETTE. It includes the name of the person as given in the newspaper followed by the death date. The date, page and section number of the newspaper is also given.

DIRECTORY OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS

The final section of this index is a directory of public officials for Fort Wayne and Allen County including elected and major appointed positions as well as names of members of local boards and commissions. This directory, is included because news articles often refer to board actions without mentioning the people who comprise the board.

The compilation of this directory was much more difficult than we had imagined. First, we had to verify the existence of various boards and commissions. And then we tried to ascertain who served on them in 1978. We have no doubt missed some boards as well as some people and we hope these will be called to our attention.

Giving credit where it is due, we wish to acknowledge the following publications which we consulted in our work: 1.) Roster of State and Local Officials of the State of Indiana, 1978; 2.) Centrex Index for the City County Building; 3.) Here is Your Indiana Government 1977/1978 issued by the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce; 4.) Your Local Government, A Guide to Fort Wayne - Allen County Government, 3rd ed, 1977 published by the Fort Wayne - Allen County League of Women Voters; 5.) Master List, Boards and Commissions City of Fort Wayne 1979 provided by the Fort Wayne office of Citizens Participation; 6.) the telephone book and of course 7.) news articles. We wish to acknowledge and thank especially the many secretaries and officials who agreed to search their files and their memories to help us in our endeavors.

We especially wish to thank THE JOURNAL-GAZETTE, in particular Richard Inskeep, Publisher, Roger Mosher, Associate Editor and Peggy Bliss, typist for their help and cooperation.

Blizzard, flood chosen top stories for 1978

No matter how you look at it — for the importance to the community or for the sheer shock value — the January blizzard and the March flood dominated the news in 1978.

Journal-Gazette editors and reporters chose the blizzard as the most significant and the most interesting story of the year, while the flood was selected No. 2 in both categories.

The reporters and editors picked 13 stories from a list of 63 as having the greatest impact on Fort Wayne or interest to local readers. Summaries of the blizzard and the flood, as well as the other 11 major stories, follow:

BLIZZARD IN LATE JANUARY

It began as just another winter snowfall, but within 24 hours, the city was blanketed with 17 inches of snow and residents were caught up in one of the worst blizzards in Fort Wayne history.

Blocked roads, badly drifted snow, stalled emergency vehicles and stranded motorists. Zero visibility plagued the area during the last four days of January.

Schools and businesses were closed, and although food markets remained open, supplies of bread, milk, toilet paper and beer were quickly exhausted in many of them.

Indiana, Ohio and Michigan were declared a disaster area by President Jimmy Carter, and it took days — and on some side streets, weeks — before the record snowfall was scraped away.

March flood

At first, the unseasonably warm weather of March brought relief to this snow- and cold-weary corner of Indiana. But it also triggered a rapid thaw that swelled Fort Wayne's three rivers to flood levels.

By March 20, the Maumee River had crept above flood stage, though only the residents of low-lying Riverhaven faced the need of evacuating. Three days later, however, the Maumee was 8.6 feet above flood stage, 25 percent of the city was under water and more than 1,000 persons were forced from their homes.

Hundreds of volunteers and city crews fought to contain the city's worst flood in 65 years with makeshift sandbag dikes and truckloads of dirt. But, by the time the water receded, an estimated $35 million in property damage had been done in Allen and Adams counties.

The two counties were declared disaster areas, and federal assistance was offered to help repair collapsed sewers, fix weakened basement walls and replace waterlogged possessions. More than 600 residents and business owners applied for aid, but the relatively clean flood water left much less damage than expected.

THE 'STING' OPERATION

Police infiltrated the ranks of criminals for four months last summer, setting up an undercover fencing operation in a vacant house at 1930 Bremer Road.

Under the guise of a fictitious firm called Famco Insulation Co., undercover officers bought some $450,000 in stolen merchandise from thieves and secretly filmed all the transactions from a hidden room in the basement of the house. The operation was financed totally by the city and county and by private donations.

When the "sting" closed Oct. 2, indictments had been issued against 62 persons. That night, more than 200 city, county and state police gathered at the National Guard Armory and then fanned out across the city, rounding up suspects.

By the end of the year, several suspects had pleaded guilty or were convicted of the charges and at least five were sentenced to prison.

THE COAL SHORTAGE

Squabbles over wildcat strikes and employee benefits kept the nation's union coal mines out of the mines and at the negotiating table for a record 109 days in late 1977 and early 1978. Most Fort Wayne residents may not have fully understood the issues, but they knew well the effects — darkness and cold.

The coal strike hit hard at stockpiles of Indiana & Michigan Electric Co.'s generating plants. In early February, I&M asked customers to conserve power voluntarily, but, when coal supplies dipped to a 40-day level, state-mandated curtailments took effect Feb. 24.

Residential customers were to cut back by 15 percent, commercial and industrial users by 25 percent and schools by 50 percent. In attempts to meet those requirements, hallway, restroom, parking-lot and display lighting was cut back, room lights were dimmed and thermostats were turned down.

Drastic layoffs were avoided, although some industries found it difficult to obtain components from manufacturers in other power-starved areas. Many schools were forced to shorten hours and cancel extracurricular activities. The 68th annual high school boys' basketball tournament was delayed three weeks.

Warming temperatures in March helped in the energy conservation effort, and by the time miners ratified a new contract March 24, operations were back to near normal in many places.

CITY SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

The issue of racial desegregation in Fort Wayne schools was not as inflammatory in 1978 as in 1977, when talk of boycotts filled the air, but several key developments emerged.

State and federal officials said in April that the system did not appear to be complying with all laws pertaining to desegregation. The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare began a new investigation of the schools.

Local plans to build a new inner-city school and renovate two others were rejected by state officials who said the schools would perpetuate racial isolation. The renovation projects at the two schools — Irwin and Ward — since were approved.

The school board, after much turmoil and indecision, agreed in May to reorganize the schools. Sixth graders were shifted from largely segregated elementary schools into desegregated middle schools. By the end of the year, nothing more had been said about a board commitment made in May to "devise a plan that significantly improves the segregated situation that exists in some elementary schools."

Plans for two inner-city magnet schools, designed to promote voluntary desegregation, achieved partial support.

SUBURBAN UTILITIES SALE

City officials were surprised and miffed to learn in August that an unidentified group of investors had arranged to buy five private utility companies despite the city's longstanding effort to acquire the water and sewer systems.

Representatives of the city charged they had been betrayed by Lincoln National Bank, one of the five companies that had owned the utilities. A federal court suit filed by a bank stockholder alleged the successful utility buyers were aided by their close ties to the bank.

The successful purchasers — who reportedly bought the five utilities for $4 million — are headed by local investment counselor Robert Howard.

The city threatened to condemn the utilities, rather than continue negotiations while the price increases.

Controversy over the sale also prompted disagreement within Lincoln Bank, leading to allegations of misconduct on the part of Robert A. Morrow, the bank's chief executive officer and board chairman.

COLISEUM DRUG ARRESTS

In a massive crackdown to straighten up rock concerts, Police Chief Kenneth Buckmaster and his men swept through Memorial Coliseum during 1978, arresting or citing some 500 persons for drug use, drinking and smoking.

The police met opposition on two fronts — from the Indiana Civil Liberties Union and from concert promoters — not to mention hostility from concert fans and bands alike.

Police had routinely frisked concert-goers while they passed through the Coliseum gates, and the local chapter of the ICLU challenged that action in court. After some negotiations, police agreed to halt the frisks unless they had probable cause to believe a person was committing a crime.

CABLE TELEVISION FRANCHISE

Citizens Cable won the city's cable television franchise in June after months of intense campaigning.

Seven cable firms competed for the lucrative franchise, which the City Council awarded to Citizens in a close vote, 5-4.

The company is owned by Cox Cable Communications of Atlanta, but has a number of local investors.

Citizens Cable promised to complete the $8.3 million citywide system in 24 months — by the summer of 1980.

THE NOVEMBER ELECTION

U.S. Rep. Dan Quayle rolled up an impressive

32,000-vote victory margin Nov. 7 to lead a Republican near-sweep.

County Councilman James Blanks was the only local Democrat to win in an election marked by important Republican gains in county government and the General Assembly.

Democrats lost a county commissioner's seat, the auditor's office, two state senate seats and the Wayne Township trustee and assessor posts.

The staggering triumph left Allen County Republicans more firmly in control of public offices here than at any time in this decade.

THE CITY ABORTION CLINIC

On June 20, the National Women's Health Organization opened quietly at 827 Webster St. after obtaining the necessary permits.

The facility, which performs abortions, was the target of regular picketing by placard-carrying protesters.

A Miami-based corporation operates the medical office, which pro-life forces here have labeled a factory to murder babies.

WHO officials, however, have said they provide a much-needed service to local women at a reasonable cost.

COUNTY BAIL BOND SYSTEM

An examination of the Allen County bail bond system by The Journal-Gazette revealed that mistakes and errors in the courts have cost the state thousands of dollars during the last five years.

Because of forgotten cases, errors in the Superior and Circuit courts, or favors granted to bail bondsmen, judges failed to forfeit bonds in repeated instances when suspects did not show up for court.

Superior Court judges later said they were handling the forfeitures poorly and started to work on a new system to avoid mistakes and delays. The Circuit Court made no moves to correct the situation and, instead, defended the delays.

FIRE OFFICIAL STEPS DOWN

Leon Horstman resigned as fire prevention chief in early July after a police investigation indicated he had abused his authority during off-duty hours.

The 17-year Fire Department veteran was the subject of several Journal-Gazette articles that quoted sources who said Horstman and Inspector William Breeden had accepted gifts and favors in exchange for overlooking fire code violations.

After the newspaper articles appeared, police sources said the complainants began to alter and deny their original accounts.

The two-month police probe cleared the two of any criminal activity. Horstman and Breeden remained in the fire prevention division of the Fire Department.

I&M RATE INCREASE

Indiana & Michigan Electric Co. was granted a 14.5 percent rate hike Sept. 21, slightly less than half the utility's $93 million initial request.

The $43 million rate hike disappointed I&M officials and opponents of the request.

Company officials said in September the utility may be forced to seek further rate increases by the end of the year.

Although the Indiana Public Service Commission cut advertising costs, fuel stock payments and reduced the rate of return requested by the utility, rate hike opponents criticized the commission for allowing I&M to charge customers for federal income taxes they claimed the firm will never pay.

STORIES RATED ON IMPACT AND INTEREST

The Journal-Gazette's editors and local news reporters reviewed the events of 1978 with two goals in mind — to list the 10 stories with the most impact on the community and to list the 10 stories with the most interest to our readers.

The articles selected for having the greatest impact on the Fort Wayne area during 1978 are:

1. The January blizzard.
2. The March flood.
3. The city's attempt to purchase five suburban utilities.
4. Desegregation problems in city schools.
5. The police "sting" operation.
6. The coal shortage.
7. The selection of Citizens Cable for the city's cable television franchise.
8. The Republican sweep in the November election.
9. Problems in the local bail bond system.
10. The 14.5 percent rate hike awarded to Indiana & Michigan Electric Co.

The 10 stories selected for their interest to our readers are:

1. The January blizzard.
2. The March flood.
3. The police "sting" operation.
4. The coal shortage.
5. Drug busts at Coliseum concerts.
6. Desegregation problems in city schools.
7. Accusations against Fire Prevention Chief Leon Horstman.
8. The opening of a city abortion clinic.
9. The November election.
10. The cable television franchise.
